

Ken Bax, RTAg – Professional Recognition Award, Registered Technologist in Agrology

Ken Bax worked as a reclamation, remediation, and decommissioning consultant in the Upstream Oil and Gas industry for 25 years. He is currently retired from being an Operations Manager- working in Calgary. During his time in the field, he travelled extensively throughout the 3 western provinces, working on and supervising projects in Alberta, Sask., and B.C. As Operations Manager, he was primarily responsible for managing a broad spectrum of liability issues related to Upstream oil and gas activities.

Ken was raised on a mixed family farm operation in SE Saskatchewan. He moved with his family to Alberta and graduated from Lakeland College with a diploma in Conservation and Reclamation in 1993. He became a registered RT(Ag) soon after the Agrology act was amended to bring College graduates into the profession. He previously served on AIA Council. He also served on different committees within AIA, after his term on Council. Ken also worked with a team of experienced and exceptional professionals in helping to develop the Practice Standards for Reclamation.

Ken enjoys travel, food, the occasional craft beer – and can't ever get enough scuba diving in.
